JOHNSON SEES NEED TO STUDY ALLIANCE

Cites President's "Erroneous Construction" in Urging Deliberation.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, January 5.—United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson, in a statement to Californians yesterday, said:

"President Harding's erroneous construction of the quadruple alliance treaty is the most cogent reason for all of us to study every word and phrase before we commit our country to this unexpected and extraordinary contract."

The statement was issued in accordance with a suggestion that he endeavor to interpret the concrete things that came out of the Washington conference on the limitation of armaments."

Senator Johnson said that there was universal approval of the original purpose of the conference and substantial unanimity in the hope and desire that armaments would be limited. Any results, he said, just to the participants, lessening armament will be more cordially and enthusiastically welcomed.

"But," he continued, "because we favor disarmament and would make almost any sacrifice for peace, is no reason why we must accept anything which may be tendered us in the sacred name of peace or under the guise of disarmament."

Important to California.

"Out of the secrecy of the conference has come, first, an unexpected treaty, unrelated to the original purpose of the gathering, and unconnected in reality with the limitation of armaments. The treaty is of transcendent importance to California and of only less importance to the nation. It should be carefully scrutinized and its meaning should be thoroughly understood before we are irrevocably committed to it."

Senator Johnson said that Great Britain and Japan had an offensive and defensive alliance, under which Great Britain's colonies were chafing; that Japan wished a continuance of the alliance; that apparently Japan insisted, if it were to be abrogated, upon something as good "and got something better." He also recited the preamble of the new quadruple alliance as follows:

"With a view of the preservation of the general peace and the maintenance of their rights in relation to their insular possessions and insular dominions in the regions of the Pacific ocean."

"This language," he said, "it now appears, was the subject of prolonged debate in the secret sessions. We do know, however, that the President himself was not aware that 'insular dominions' included Japan and asserted in a public interview that it did not."

"Messrs. Hughes, Root, Lodge and Underwood, representing the United States, and those representing the other nations say that 'insular dominions' are intended to include the islands of Japan as well as New Zealand and Australia, and their construction is now accepted."

Island Possessions Guaranteed.

"The first admitted fact in any discussion of the treaty is that the maintenance of our island possessions is guaranteed."

Article II of the alliance provides, in substance, he said, that "if the rights of the parties are threatened by aggressive action of any other power, the parties shall communicate with one another fully and frankly in order to arrive at an understanding as to the most efficient measures to be drawn jointly and separately, to meet the exigencies of the particular situation."

"To make a concrete illustration: If aggressive action shall threaten Japan the United States shall meet with the other three powers to determine the most efficient measures to be taken, jointly and separately, to meet the aggression."

"On the one hand, it is contended that this language means no more than that the parties, having met and determined the most efficient means to meet the aggression, may do nothing further; while on the other hand it is asserted that the purpose of the contract being the maintenance of the rights of the parties, when aggression threatens these rights and the parties meet and determine the efficient means of meeting the aggression they are in honor bound to execute the 'means' decided upon."

"Unless behind the treaty there is the power to enforce it and the understanding that the power shall be used to 'meet the exigencies of the particular situation' the instrument is a useless and futile fulmination."

Senator Johnson in his statement paralleled article II of the alliance to article X of the league of nations, and after quoting a recent interview of the Japanese premier, said:

"There is an official utterance that the new alliance supersedes the old offensive and defensive British-Japanese alliance and is much wider in bearing, and that its guarantee strengthens Japan's position in the far east."

"Of course, what I write," he concluded, "is written of the document as it has been put before us. The policy of treaties of this sort has so recently been discussed that at the moment I do not attempt to reiterate views held in common with the overwhelming majority of our people."

"Upon the facts now presented and the treaty as it stands, among many others, is one most important question: Shall the United States, either jointly with Great Britain and France or separately, guarantee or underwrite Japan?"

The Graceful Woman

"I am fully convinced that there is no necessity of the fallen arches and the weak feet that so deform many women at the present time," says Louis Chalif, exponent of the classical dance.

"In the last few years, since young women have taken to classical dancing, their feet have improved greatly; and also since women have taken to walking, golfing, tennis and other sports the improvement has been marked. The result is that a woman may wear her sport shoe, her walking shoe and her evening shoe all with equal comfort and that is because she has developed a strong foot."

"The woman who sits the greater part of the day does not develop the muscles of the feet and so she has not the fallen arch, but the weak feet. The woman who is almost constantly on her feet has not developed sufficient strength to support the weight of her body, so she has a 'fallen arch.' Immediately she resorts to artificial supports ill-fitting shoes contribute to the muscular mal-conditions of the feet for the nerves of the foot are cramped and the free circulation of blood interfered with."

"We need, and we need badly pleasing methods of exercising the feet. The best exercise that can be had for the feet is the classical dancing, because I have seen hundreds of poor, weak feet rejuvenated through this exercise."

"The foot strength and comfort which are essential to the graceful woman—and to every woman's happiness—are obtained by wearing Cantilever Shoes, whose flexible arches (not stiff as in ordinary shoes) permit the muscles to exercise freely while walking. Shape like the foot, there is no pressure on the nerves, no restriction of circulation. The flexible arch supports a weak foot while natural exercise is strengthening it."

You walk gracefully in Cantilever Shoes. You feel well and you look well. The style is correct for semi-dress and daytime wear.
